CEOSET S. NOTES Editor. THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent circulation in Washington three times larger than that of any other paper in the city. As a local NEWS paper and

Advertising Medium it has no competitor. The citizens whose property it is proposed to take in order to form Rock Creek Park are justly entitled to the actual value of their land, to be reimbursed for their actual loss, no more and no less. The commission which has inspected the property and heard a vast deal of testimony concerning its value will doubtless reach through personal view and the witnesses heard a reasonable decision in the matter, just to the owners and just also to the public. The property owners have expressed their confidence on this point. The public feel the same confidence. There is no disposition whatever on the part of the general community to enjoy the benefits of the park at the expense of the citizens whose land is condemned. Nor, on the other hand, is there any disposition to acquiesco in fanciful values placed upon parts of the land, which, if assented to, would seriously decrease the size of the park and might defeat the project altogether. Whatever THE STAR has said on this point has aimed, not to influence the commission at all in its assessment of values, which duty all concede that it will perform fairly and faithfully, but in the public interest to discourage exaggerated and ridiculous claims on the part of property owners themselves. If one owner thinks he discovers | C o some new value in his property which was not dreamed of before the land was required for park purposes, and bases a claim thereon. other owners, not to be outdone, are straightway inflamed to make the same claim, and enlarged expectations are created which are almost certain to be disappointed. the condemnation proceedings. If on the R other hand the community should assent to these fanciful claims the action would be treated as furnishing justification for the slander recently circulated by a number of papers outside of Washington, that the park project was a real estate "lob" for the benefit of those who were to seil the property to the government. This slander was accompanied by the suggestion of a repeal of the park measure by the coming Congress. Thus, however treated, these imaginative claims of value threaten the park, which THE STAR and the community believe will become the crowning scenic glory of the capital, adding to it both health and new attractiveness. Washington would not wish to see any Rock creek property owner cheated in this transaction, but it may well implore them to be reasonable.

The death of Return J. Meigs removes from Washington one of its oldest and best citizens. He has watched the city in many of the most important stages of its development, and has shared in its progress. He was a man with an interesting history and an integrity of character that was oblivious to consideration of personal benefit. His name is closely associated with those of some of the nation's greatest men, who were proud to reckon him among their friends. He will be greatly missed, not only by his immediate associates in office, but by many of the outside world. His conscientious nature was shown by the manner in which he came daily to his desk, rain or shine, at an age when most men would have been more than willing to leave the burdens to younger hands and accept from the government a leisure that had not been half so well earned. No one at all familiar with the City Hall has failed to admire the devotion to duty displayed by the venerable clerk.

The Postmaster General, with the progressiveness that has always characterized his adpostal delivery system. In this he is in ac gord with public sentiment. The extension of free delivery has already worked wonders and the inhabitants of small villages are justified in their demand for the mail facilities enjoyed by cities of ten thousand population and upward. Whatever increases public convenience and comfort, and especially whatever increases public intelligence, is within the purview of government, provided it is constitutional, and whatever is desired by the people and is manifestly for their advantage is very apt sooner or later to become constitutional, either by direct vote of the states or by construction of the federal judiciary. The position of the Postmaster General is one that meets a long and increasingly felt want. All that is required to make it operative everywhere is the money to accomplish it. That cannot long be wanting.

The matter of railway locomotion is one of the most practical problems to which Edison has yet given his attention. It will carry with it more benefit, perhaps, than anything else that this wenderful inventor has given the world. In these busy days genius must be practical to be appreciated. Science has taken practical to be appreciated. Science has taken the place of literature to a considerable extent WE HAVE JUST CLOSED OUT A LOT OF 200 Children's Coats (Gretchen style). Sizes 6 to 1: as the recognized field of mental application. Some maker of epigrams will yet christen him "the Shakespeare of science," and the title will be recognized without any sense of incongruity There is something of the tremendous in genius that produces a phonograph, a talking doll or a railway with the ease and in the perfection that a poet gives us a sonnet, a comed or a tragedy.

The pastoral letter of the Methodist ecumeni cal council is a notable document. It is no a perfunctory performance, congratulating the courches on their history and progress and dealing in pleasant platitudes; for there is lifted out of the past, over the present, into the future. The social evils that characterize the times are mentioned and the church's duty in the premises temperately but courageously pointed out. Altogether the letter is worthy of the council and adequate for its purpose.

It is interesting to note the different "impressions of America" received by theatrical in a way that takes their breath away, and by foreign literary people who find their work recognized without satisfactory compensation. prove it. Truly, the cynic seems to have reason for his remark that there is no such thing as an unbiased opinion.

It seems from the later accounts that the assault of the Chilian mob on the American sailors in Valparaiso was indefensible and brutal. Only one man was killed, but another was probably mortally injured. It is gratifying to the national dignity to discover that the Baltimore's men were not responsible for the unfortunate offsir. -

The night schools are once more engaged in their important duties. They fulfill an important function, employing the time that would go to the making of idlers and criminals in producing useful and intelligent men. The system of night schools is something that deserves even more attention than it has received from publicspirited men. Ireland needs her stout-hearted persistence

She has again been storm swept-this time by old ocean. The little island has more than her share of difficulties, and her troubles follow the proverb by never coming singly.

If the meetings held in honor of Gov. Hill in the south continue to do abundant honor to his rival, ex-President Cleveland, the Hill boom will go back two steps every time it goes for-
